> My husband and I live in Uppermill and have always loved walking in the area. The footpath over the railway at Moorgate has been the beginning of many of our walks.
> When the alternative route was suggested, my husband went to investigate it. Unfortunately I could only manage the walk from Oldham Road to the foot of the steps, but my husband struggled the whole way up this treacherous path to Ladcastle Road. We both noted the extremely dangerous exit onto the main road.
> This would be a terrible alternative to building a footbridge over the railway. As usual it has all boiled down to money, with no thought to the danger involved in using the alternative.
